

KIDZO WEST HEARING AND VISION SCREENING CONSENT FORM

Hearing screenings are an important tool that can identify hearing concerns in children and prevent problems with communication, learning, and development. Early detection of hearing concerns and appropriate strategies leads to better speech and language and educational outcomes for children, allowing children to achieve their best. Children should have their hearing screened at least once a year between birth and the age of five. As part of our screening program, ENMRSH would provide hearing screenings twice a year for our center.

I give consent for ENMRSH to screen my child's hearing.

I do not give consent for ENMRSH to screen my child's hearing.

Vision screenings are an important tool that can help identify vision concerns in children. Young eyes change quickly, and it is not always easy to tell when children have difficulty seeing. Any undetected vision concern can compromise a child's academic success, joy of learning, and social confidence. Early detection of vision concerns and appropriate strategies leads to better social participation and educational outcomes for children, allowing children to achieve their best. Therefore, children should receive a vision screening at least once a year throughout early childhood. As part of our screening program, Lion's Club would provide hearing screenings twice a year for our center.

I give consent for Lion's Club to screen my child's vision.

I do not give consent for Lion's Club to screen my child's vision.
